Obama tops in Omaha, losing handily to all but Palin statewide

Raleigh, N.C. - Nebraska split its electors for the first time in 2008, when President Obama won the $2^{\text {nd }}$ Congressional District containing Omaha by $1 \%$, and John McCain won the other four votes. Because the Obama campaign so heavily targeted the $2^{\text {nd }}$ district, McCain took the entire state by only 15 points, far less than George W. Bush's 34-point victory over John Kerry. In PPP’s first look at the state for the 2012 cycle, Obama remains at least as strong as two years ago, still winning Omaha by nine to 24 points but losing statewide to all four Republican frontrunners-most narrowly to Sarah Palin, who, like in PPP's recent Texas poll, edges the president by only a single point.

Overall, Mike Huckabee does just a hair worse than McCain, with a 51-38 edge over Obama, who loses to Mitt Romney, 49-37, and Newt Gingrich, 48-40. But Palin comes in with just a razor-thin 45-44 advantage. The president loses independents by a point to Huckabee, but beats Romney by six, Palin by 15, and Gingrich by 17. The problem for Palin is Republican defection. While he only pulls $10-13 \%$ of the GOP against the others, Obama takes $18 \%$ versus Palin, holding her to only $69 \%$, while the others earn 74 $78 \%$ of their party. The president also earns $80 \%$ of Democrats against Palin, a little better than his $75-79 \%$ versus the others.

Palin only beats the president by five points in the $1^{\text {st }}$ district, and is down by a whopping 24 in the $2^{\text {nd }}$. The other three prevail by 14 to 18 points in the $1^{\text {st }}$ and trail by only nine to 19 in the $2^{\text {nd }}$. She also does worst in the most conservative of the districts, the $3^{\text {rd }}$, beating the president there by 25 points; the others show margins of 29 to 34 points.

Huckabee is far and away the best liked of the five candidates, with a 44-33 favorability rating to Romney's 38-35, Palin's 42-50, and Gingrich's 34-43. The president, by comparison, has a 38-56 job approval margin, among his worst standings anywhere in the country. With this lopsided likeability and an 18-point registration advantage over the Democrats, each of the Republicans ought to be winning soundly statewide.
"Barack Obama looks poised to take an electoral vote in Nebraska again next year unless the state changes its system for dispensing them or makes serious changes to the lines of its Congressional districts," said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling.

PPP surveyed 977 Nebraska voters from January $26^{\text {th }}$ to $27^{\text {th }}$. The survey's margin of error is $+/-3.1 \%$. Other factors, such as refusal to be interviewed and weighting, may introduce additional error that is more difficult to quantify.
